

HISTORICAL SKETCH

By Maj. E. A. Giller

White Hall, Ill.

1896

Not long ago I was visiting Mrs. Luthera Thaxton at her comfortable residence, and we were talking over old times, when Mrs. Baker came into the room and requested me to pen down my recollections of the Swallow family with whom I became acquainted over sixty years ago. With Mrs. Thaxton's help and the family records I could go back to the time when Squire Swallow, who had married a Miss Wood lived on a farm a few miles from Windsor village, Vermont. They had a numerous large family and I think fifteen of them grew to be men and women, and all married, and with few exceptions all came west. In August 1819, the two oldest girls, Deidamia and Prudence were married at the same time; the former to Timothy Ladd and the latter to Asahel North. Loading their belongings into a two-horse wagon, they left the old home and started for the far west. It was a long, wearisome journey jolting over the corduroy roads of Indiana and other rough places, but finally landed in Madison county, Illinois, where they spent the winter of 1819 and summer of 1820. Their first two children were born there; both, however, dying shortly after they moved to this locality. In the spring of 1821, their husbands having spent the summer of 1820 looking over Uncle Sam's territory, which was not yet in market, they went as far north as what is now Morgan county, Illinois, but finally decided to locate in Greene county, the appearance of the country and the mixtures of timber and prairie suiting them. They bought a log house, intending to move their families into it the next spring, but before they arrived, the cabin went up in smoke, leaving them homeless. They got leave to take their beds into a neighbor's cabin at night, moving them out in the daytime. They finally ended their investigation by locating near what is now the Marcus North home. On their way after crossing Apple Creek, they overtook Benjamin Drummond who was on his way to the promised land. His team had given out and he was stuck at the foot of the them big hill, and he told me in later days that he never forgot their kindness in pulling the load to the top of the hill. Mr. North was a man of considerable means for those days, but Mr. Ladd was not overburdened with the filthy trash that is causing so much trouble these days. Mr. North entered considerable land and Mr. Ladd entered eighty acres on which Thos. Giller now lives, and on which he built a log cabin out on the open prairie about forty rods east of the present Maple Grove schoolhouse. The settlers who had located in the timber where wood and water were handy, expected them to freeze out the first winter, but they managed to survive.

These branches of the Swallow family being located here caused others of the family to follow. As the years rolled on, Nabum, Chester, Ransom, Guy, Gardener and Franklin, made their appearance and Nancy, Eliza, Jane and Luthera, making six of the girls. One of the daughters and two of the sons remained in Vermont, and one girl, Olivia, married a Mr. Hinman of Battle Creek, Mich. These were strenuous times for these women who had blazed the way, as it were, for the rest of the family, but they were grand women and their descendants have good reason to feel proud of them. I honestly think that two more honest, conscientious women never lived. I never knew the care of a mother, my mother dying when I was an infant, but I certainly could not have thought more of her than I did of Mother Ladd. She had grown up in an environment which had caused her to join the Baptists but she was far from being a bigot, and though a consistant member, did not try to keep her children from having such social enjoyments as suited them. Father Ladd was not a member of any church, but when the preachers and brethern called on their way from the south to Winchester, he always helped the good wife to entertain them.

She was a very industrious woman, had a loom and was quite a weaver and spinner and is said to have made enough money at weaving for the neighbors to build a large barn. Her girls also were spinners but never learned to weave. Before I was married one of the most pleasant sights to me was watching my wife spin and I have to content myself these days at watching her knit, at which she is an expert. These reminiscences, being penned for the information of the younger generation of the Swallow family, I have to depend upon the last living member of the Swallow family,

Aunt Luthera, as we call her. She informs me that the cabin they bought, which was burned, had belonged to John Andrews, whose claim Mr. North purchased and the cabin they made their beds in at night belonged to a Mr. Bebee. In the course of time, the Norths and Ladds concluded to visit their eastern relatives. They each had a wagon and team and they each took two children with them. The Norths went to Connecticut and the Ladds to New Hampshire and both families before they started back, visited the old home in Vermont. They were gone all summer, having rented their farms for one year and got back before winter. Mrs. Mary McCollister, grandmother of the present C. I. McCollister, took care of the Ladd home and a Mr. Loveland of the North home and Aunt Luthera says that Mr. North remarked that the trip east was the best investment they ever made, for when they returned, the women were perfectly satisfied with their home. She says that a dog started east with them, but they lost him in Buffalo, N. Y., but he managed to get back home—a most wonderful trip certainly ever made.

In 1843 the folks of Apple Creek Prairie got up a big Fourth of July barbecue, which was held in a grove close to the North residence. It was a big affair. There was a Revolutionary soldier there and a company of mounted militia commanded by Damon Griswold who had been elected a colonel. I was a member of the company and doubtless we felt pretty grand. At that time I was working for Put Vedder who lived west of town, and my cousin, Robert Frost and Isaac McCollister were working for Wm. McCollister who owned the farm that Isaiah Potts now owns. We were all getting eight dollars a month and of course were getting rich, anyhow at that time. The spread was first class and the old revolutionary soldier, Caleb Post, who then owned the farm that Chas. Giller now owns, seemed to enjoy it as much as any of us. In 1851 Deldamia and her husband with their only son, Timothy, went east to visit relatives. My wife and self took care of the farm while they were gone. Mr. Ladd had a half brother named Fellows who visited them. He was a silversmith and quite a prominent man of Lowell, Mass. Mr. Ladd's mother lived in New Hampshire, whom they visited. Deldamia's sister, Mary, married a brother of Hiram Ellis and they lived in Castleton, Vermont. He died and she married Dr. Northrop. Of course they visited all the relatives at Windsor and other places. My wife and I have been east several times and visited with the most of these relatives of the Swallows and Ladds. Timothy Ladd was quite a mechanic and was noted far and wide for the wooden mold board plows that he made for breaking the prairie sod. The demand for them was great, and he had all he could do. A Mr. Woodman who was a noted blacksmith living east of Carrollton, did the ironing of them. They were huge affairs and to the present generation would be quite a curiosity. When I first knew the Ladd farm, there were several of them lying around.

Mr. Ladd's oldest children being girls, he had to depend a great deal on them for help on the farm, and my wife when a girl was noted as an expert corn-dropper, no light task for a growing girl. Mr. North, when I knew him in the forties had built a substantial frame house, some of which is now part of the Marcus North residence.

Mrs. Mary McCollister who kept house for the Ladds when they went east, was a widow with four children, viz: William, Saunders, Isaac and Mary who married Henry Floyd. Her children all did well and became quite prominent citizens. Many interesting and amusing incidents could be related of those early days, but not being connected with the Swallow family have no place in a paper of this character, but belong to what may be called general history. One thing I will mention: It took a long time for a letter to come from the east and the postage was twenty-five cents and money was none too plentiful. They had to go to Edwardsville to get their mail and grain ground, and when they got to the mill, had to take their turn and frequently waited all night. Yes! those were the good old times; do we want any more of them?

Ambrose Swallow and wife, Mary, came to Chelmsford, Mass., from England on or before 1666. No records of their births or marriage can be found. He died October 25, 1684.

Their children were born in Chelmsford, Mass.—Ambrose, John, Joseph and Benjamin.

Mr. Woods went to New Ipswich with his cattle to pasture. He was killed in felling a tree. He survived a few hours. A message was sent to his wife, who started on horse-back just ~~at~~ sunset, with a child three months old in her arms, and rode all night, arriving at New Ipswich just in time to witness his death and close his eyes. Her seven children were all small, the oldest being eleven. They had a large farm and kept a public house. She stayed there until her children were grown and married. She then married Amariah Swallow, February 16, 1786.

GUY SWALLOW

Guy Swallow was born October 4, 1808, on his father's farm, foot of Ascutney Mountain, Windsor county, Vermont. The farm extended up the mountain. His education was obtained in the school near his home. It was the best that could be obtained at that time. He followed farming in his native state for a few years after his marriage; but becoming tired of the rocks and hills, decided to try his fortune in the far west, of which he had heard such glowing descriptions from his brothers and sisters. So in the fall of 1837 with his wife and three small children, the youngest one a year old, started for Illinois. His household goods among which was a cook stove taken apart and packed in a box, were loaded into a wagon drawn by three horses. Mother was not strong and thought she could not stand it to cook by the fire place as women did in the west. It was the first stove in the neighborhood. November 10, 1837 he moved to the farm where Edgar Husted now lives, having bought it from his brother Franklin. There was a log house on the place, built without a nail. The doors were made of split boards and fastened together with wooden pins. The puncheon floor was fastened down with pins. The door had wooden hinges, and a wooden latch with a leather string. The roof was fastened on with weight poles. The week before we moved in, Uncle Frank put in a one-sash window, for mother was used to modern houses of the east and he thought she could not live without a window. The next spring father took the roof off and built it up three logs higher and put on a steep shingle roof; having made the shingles, we then had another room reached by a ladder. It was not many years until a frame addition of one room, a closet and pantry with cellar built underneath. In 1845 with his wife and youngest child, he returned to Vermont and spent the summer. The trip both going and coming was made by wagon with a team of colts he had raised. They averaged 40 miles a day when on the roads. After his return friends asked if old Vermont did not look good. He said the hills looked larger and the valleys smaller. Mother was not homesick after their return. The first barn was covered, roof and sides, with boards he made. By economy and hard work the farm was paid for and in 1848 the old house was moved away and replaced with a frame building, very modern for those days. He was in favor of good schools and did all he could to have one in his neighborhood but without success. He died of pneumonia in 1850, respected by all. This is as I remember it.

George Norton Northrop spent two years as a member of Magdalen College, Oxford, where he undertook research work in literature and history under Prof. Walter Raleigh and Prof. Chas.
Firth, two of the most distinguished scholars in England. His tutor there was Mr. P. V. M. Benecker, a grandson of Mendelsohn, the composer. He had for college friends many men belonging to interesting English families. Young William Gladstone, grandson of the "grand old man" was among them; another was related to Lord MaCauley, etc. He spent five summers in Europe, traveling in Germany, France, Ireland, Scotland, etc. and visited many friends in delightful English country homes. It is interesting to note that he contributed poems to English magazines and had a book published in Oxford in April of 1909. The British reviews were very kind in what they had to say about it.

DONALD BYINGTON—Born August 30, 1887.

In the latter part of March, 1834, Lutheria, Frank and Ransom Swallow started in a stage from West Windsor, Vermont, on their long trip to the far west. Like many other New Englanders, they were going to a new country to start in life. They first stopped at Farmington, Connecticut, where they remained a week while Ransom bought clocks to ship to Illinois. These were shipped by way of New Orleans. From Farmington, still in the stage, they went to Hartford, Connecticut, and from there by boat to New York City. Philadelphia was the next stopping place. For part of the distance from New York to Philadelphia they rode on a boat and part on the steam cars. At Philadelphia they again took the stage and crossed the Allegheny Mountains, riding three days and four nights, stopping only for meals and to change horses. At Pittsburg a steamboat bound for Alton, Illinois, was boarded. From Alton they came to Jerseyville in a farm wagon with a Mr. Pruitt, and from there they came with a Mr. Day to Mr North's residence on Apple Creek Prairie. At the time this memorable trip was made, Lutheria Swallow was but sixteen, and before another year rolled around she was married.

"The friends of Fred are here today,
Respects unto his bride to pay
And wish her many happy years
Of wedded bliss and love that cheers.
And may her husband all through life
Feel thankful he got such a wife;
And treasure her and make her feel
That as a man he is as true as steel.
And if in after years perchance
They should look back and take a glance
At their past life, may it all seem
As though it were a pleasant dream."

EARLY SETTLERS OF ROWLEY, MASSACHUSETTS.

Early in the winter of 1638-9, a company of emigrants, numbering about twenty families, with Rev. Ezekiel Rogers as their guide, left Yorkshire, England and came to Salem, Massachusetts where they spent the winter, it being too late in the season to proceed further in their investigations. When in Salem their number increased to sixty families. When spring opened, they removed to a location they had chosen half way between the towns of Ipswich and Newbury. They purchased of these two towns, for eight hundred pounds, an extensive tract of land now comprising the towns of Rowley, Boxford, Bradford, Groveland, Georgetown, and parts of two or three others. The site of their settlement is the site of Rowley village at the present time. This place was probably selected on account of its pleasantness, its nearness to a river, and the abundance of thatch that grew upon the river banks, with which they could cover the roofs of their humble dwellings and apply it to many other purposes in their primitive arts. Under the name of Rowley, they obtained a charter, or an "Act of Incorporation," Sept. 4, 1639. They held their lands and labored in common for nearly five years, when they laid out to each family a house-lot, etc. The colony lived and thrived in spite of the many disadvantages that accrue to such conditions, and soon became a prominent colonial town. Their harvests were mostly abundant, their cottages warm, and everything appeared as cheerful and pleasant as could be expected. The southwestern portion of the town (Rowley) which is now known as Boxford, remained unsettled for many years. From time immemorial the only occupants had been a tribe of North American Indians called the Agawams.

Robert Stiles, in 1659, we find, owned a farm of two hundred and fifty acres, with buildings thereon in Rowley village. Robert Stiles was married October 4, 1660 to Elizabeth Frye, daughter of John Frye of Andover, Massachusetts.

FOOT NOTES FROM THE STILES GENEALOGY, Page 16.

John Frye, father of Elizabeth, was from Basing, Hants Co., England. He arrived in the harbor of Boston in August 1638, bringing with him his wife and three children: John (Dea. John of Andover), born 1633; Benjamin, born 1635; Elizabeth, born 1637, (married Robert Stiles).

This account is from a letter of Theophilus D. Frye of Montclair, New Jersey, Genealogist of the Frye Family.

Among the posterity of the emigrants, John and Anne Frye, these have been from the first, persons of note. This is shown by the following epitome from Miss Bailey's Historical Sketches of Andover, Massachusetts. Mr. Frye was one of the first settlers in this town, and his offspring of great note; there were corporals, sergeants, clerks, ensigns, lieutenants, twelve captains, majors, colonels and major generals; two judges of the courts superior and court of common pleas, and two that held the title of Honorable Councillors, several justices of the peace, and some excellent citizens. (U. S. Senator Frye of Maine is a descendent of John Frye in line of his son Samuel.)

MRS. E. A. GILLER'S BIRTHDAY.

On March 3, 1905, a birthday party was given at the C. H. Giller residence, and the following old ladies were present: Mrs. Luthera Thaxton, Mrs. Rosetta Tunison, Mrs. Ellen Clark, Mrs. Shaw, Mrs. Sarah Dickson, Mrs. Elizabeth North and Mrs. Lucy Tunison. From unavoidable causes the following old ladies who were invited, could not attend: Mrs. Henry A. Griswold, Mrs. Lucetta Hodges, Mrs. Kendall, Mrs. C. Vanderheyden, Mrs. Avia Moulton, Mrs. C. Quigley and Mrs. E. V. Baldwin.

When seated for dinner the following lines written for the occasion were read by the Major:—

1820.

THE STORKS.

1905.

Three-fourths of a century ago, I am told,
The storks of that day invaded the fold
Of good Mother Ladd on the prairie out west
And left to her care in the well prepared nest
A pair of young twins, a girl and a boy,
To gladden the heart of the mother with joy;
But sickness came on and the mother so fond
Saw the son pass away to the great far beyond.
The girl lived along and to womanhood grew,
Was married and had of children, a few,
Who are scattered around and playing their part
In this drama of life, where success is an art.
And now in this year nineteen hundred-and-five
On the third day of March, she is yet alive,
And ready to do her full share of knitting.
And Life's other cares has no notion of quitting
This tribute I pay to a kind, loving wife
Who has made it so pleasant for me in this life
That the fifty-six years of married life seem
To me to be just like a long, happy dream.

When I wrote these lines I was nearly 84 years old and as you will perceive from the poem, my wife is no spring chicken. Am also an old Mexican "vet."—Major E. A. Giller.

GOLDEN WEDDING

Ring, ring the bells! fire off the guns!
And let the people know
That Lucy North and Edgar G.,
Were married fifty years ago,
Within the busy human hive
They have played well an active part
As earnest workers, and their deeds
Have gladdened many a troubled heart;
As neighbors, friends and citizens,
We gather here from far and near,
To wish them joy, and take the hand
And do our best their hearts to cheer
On this, their golden wedding day
For fifty years have gone and past
Since Edgar married Lucy North
And she with him her lot did cast,
Yes, we will wish with hearts sincere
That their declining years be blest
With grateful ease 'mid happy scenes
Of peaceful quietude and rest.

The above lines were written for the golden wedding of Edgar and Lucy Griswold by E. A. Giller.
